- Conditional offers do not always guarantee the subjects that have been selected by a candidate will be the subjects undertaken at A level. Subjects to be studied are determined by exam results and availability of spaces.
- If a subject has not been studied at GCSE level then it may still be possible for that subject to be taken at A-level. See the individual course requirements for more information.
- The school and its governors reserve the right to reduce curriculum time allocated to a specific course due to low uptake of students and also to withdraw a course due to an extremely low uptake from students.
